presents ...

INTRODUCTORY RADIOGRAPHIC TECHNIQUE

Offered each January
May September

A 48-hour
x-ray course designed for beginning radiographers
and for others who wish to brush up on their x-ray quality.
Open to all radiographers
from all specialties.

INTRODUCTORY RADIOGRAPHIC TECHNIQUE

LEARN ABOUT:

Anatomy and terminology
How the x-ray equipment works
How to control x-ray quality Density, contrast, definition, distortion Patient positioning Radiation protection Quality assurance/Trouble-shooting Guidelines for preparation of a good exposure technique chart

This course provides an excellent training background for the paraprofessional new to the field of radiologic technology.

After completing all 48 hours of academic instruction, those who follow training recommendations and complete course requirements should be functional in an office x-ray facility.

Students must have access to x-ray equipment to complete in-your-office training requirements.

Also provides an excellent review of x-ray technique for doctors and is acceptable for DC license renewal continuing education credit (doctors should not attend first 3 hours).

This course meets Washington state requirements
for x-ray operators
